Canadian Pacific Leads With Five Points Gain-Gains Are Marked Throughout the List.

NEW YORK, March 27 -- Noon .- The stock market is holding up fairly well, but the volume of trading is not as heavy as it has been. It was quite a blow to the underpinning of the market to have the Union Pacific announce its intention to issue $50,000,000 bonds, which it expects to market at about 41/4 per

London started in with a good advance, and this, with the declines sustained yesterday afternoon, helped the opening in this market. The gains were inconsequential, rarely over 14 to 1/2 point, the exceptions being Soo Line, with 1% gain, and Canadian Pacific, which moved up a like amount. Baltimore and Ohio was strong with a % advance. Some of the old-time leaders of the market did not move with much show of activity. Northwestern was a point down, and Pennsylvania was barely steady. American Ice lost 34.

Industrials generally showed but little change; indeed, the market at noon had not developed much activity nor indicated its probable course during the

I p. m.—In the first hour of the aftermoon the market became very active and strong, prices advancing very rapidly, under the leadership of Canadian Pacific, Delaware and Hudson, and a number of high grade rails. The shorts became scared and the bulls encouraged. The reopening of the Knickerbocker, of the National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City, and the reported better conditions in different sections turned the tide. In the display of strength that followed Soo Line recovered its dividend, and in addition another point, making a gain for the day of 4 points.

Union Pacific met with good support and advanced 1½. Reading added another point to its gain, Great Northern, Baltimore and Ohio, and a number of minor stocks a full point, Canadian Pacific 5 points, St. Paul, Louisville and Nashville, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, and others ½% Points, Canadian Pacific, and theres ½%; Southern Pacific, 4, and the industrials were either strong or ledd their own.

CINCINNATI, March 27.—Here's a modernized Enoch Arden case. The two husbands shook hands. The wife tearfully looked on as one turned away with the remark, "I give her up. She was your wife first, and she wants you now."

He answered them correctly. Then they gave him a harder one. They told him to name over every make of piano.

With a low, coarse chuckle, one of the crowd requested the sage to name three former Vice Presidents.

MARAUDING BEAR AND LARD CAN TRAP

Four prospectors started to explore and hunt through the Bitter Root range end hunt through the Bitter Root range in Idaho, and in a sheltering valley built them a long cabin. In the beginning of January the snow lay so deep that they had to keep indoors for a time. The cabin contained one room, with a large fireplace at the side opposite the door, while next the walls were ranged the two double bunks facing each other. Alongside the chimney was a large closet in which the provisions were stored, and the guns—the only firearms they had—were stacked against the cuboard door at night.

The cabin door was fastened with a wooden latch. One night, while the party was sound asleep, there came a crash, and as each man sat up in his bunk he saw in the full light of the fire a big bear. He had knocked down the guns, and they lay beneath his feet, while the owners stared at the enemy, without the slightest idfa what to do.

In fact, there was nothing to do but look on. Pretty soon the bear gave a snift and brought forth from the cupboard a large piece of bacon, which he devoured. Then he lunched on some buckwheat, and presently there came the rattle of a tin can, and the prospectors knew that bruin had found the lard.

They could hear him sucking away at the delicious substance, and were won-

They could hear him sucking away at the delicious substance, and were wondering what he would next attack, when there came a snift, but not of satisfaction, and then a rattle of the can. Then suddenly, with a deeper snift, bruin faced around, and they saw that he was muzzled with the lard can. It was round, and fitted his jaws perfectly, and he made it fit tighter by trying to open his mouth.

At first he gave the can a gentle tap on the door, as if to argue with it, then the taps came faster and faster, and the bear began to spin around as he banged away. It was a funny performance, and the spectators had all they could do to keep from laughing; but they knew the hear's claws were not muzzled, so they discreetly smothered their risibles and watched the performer, until, with one great growl of concentrated rage, he darted out of the door, giving a final hang on the doorway as he passed. Then the four men laughed until the tears ran down their cheeks. It was too dark to pursue the bear, but they put a log against the door as a precaution against his return.—Exchange.
